The Vision & Message

The National Society For Human Rights

The National Society For Human Rights has been established in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia on 18/1/1425H corresponding to 9/3/2004G with the aim of defending humans beings and protecting their human rights under the ordainments of the Islamic Faith, and the enjoiments of the Basic Governance Act, the valid Rules and Regulations, and the International Conventions and Declarations that do not conflict with the Islamic ordainments.

About the Society

The National Society For Human Rights is a non-governmental financially and administratively independent national body. It protects human rights of the citizens, residents, and visitors and supports those rights within and without the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, as well as cooperates with the International Governmental and Non-governmental Organizations world-wide.

The Vision of the Society

Participating in building up the society of equity and reign of the law according to the gracious Islamic Ordainments which call for tolerance, elimination of oppression, aggression and extremism.

The Message of the Society

Protecting and defending human rights and disseminating the culture thereof, and taking the necessary procedures to redress the complaints and the transgressions relating to human rights in order to check and eliminate such violations, and in addition, drawing up studies, convening conferences, symposiums, workshops, and publishing print-outs, announcing stances, and preparing reports.

DEFINITIONS

Since its inception, the National Society for Human Rights has received a lot of cases which have been classified as follows:

1- Administrative Cases

These are files received by the Society against governmental departments, which revolve around the following:

Request for revision of a decision or grant of a royal pardon, or execution of a judicial verdict; claims of transgression of personal property, objection to a decision, claims about medical faults, aggression, or transgression by some administrative parties, complaints about unemployment, compulsory deportation; requests for profession adjustment, claims about damage from environmental pollution, or poor service rendered to a client; requests for reemployment, transportation or transfer; claims of aggression, dismissal from job because of unsound charge, arbitrary dismissal; demands for compensation or for financial or administrative entitlements; or claims of unofficial pursuit, lengthy procedures, arbitrary transfer, or prohibition from travel vide an administrative decision.

2- Prisoners' Cases

These are files received by the Society concerning petitions for commutation of verdicts, protestation against the transfer of a prisoner, or deteriorating health condition at the prison; or demand for release following expiration of the imprisonment term, or complaint about unfair trials, or request for release or transfer to another prison, or for health care, or claims against maltreatment, violations of rules within the prison, or prevention of visits.

3- Laborers' Cases

These are complaints submitted to the Society by the laborers who are subject to the Labor Law. Such complaints include grievances against forcing the laborers to pay the Residency Permit Renewal Fees, protestation against decisions, delay in taking employment decisions, deprivation of promotion, decisions on demotions, compulsory deportation, or demands for transfer of sponsorship; or complaints about subjection to psychological violence, arbitrary dismissal; or claims for financial entitlements, or compelling the laborer to perform duties other than agreed upon under the employment contract, or forcing early contracting, or claims for social insurance, reemployment, or prevention of the laborer from traveling to his country.

4- Family Violence Cases

These are complaints received by the Society against family members who perpetrate physical or psychological harm or violent acts provoked by addiction, or by other stimuli such as indictment, slander, sexual harassment, or rape or deprivation from education, employment, marriage, or from seeing one's mother, or resulting from denying asylum.

5- Personal Affairs Cases

These are complaints and cases received by the Society concerning divorce, nursing, alimony, desertion, withholding custody, denying one from seeing one's own sons, deprivation from inheritance, or non-recognition of marriage and filing for divorce.

6- Civil Affairs Cases

These issues relate to requests, complaints or claims on withdrawal of nationality or filing for recovering the same, or withdrawal of identity documentation, or non-addition of sons, or failure of documentation of some occurrences relating to civil affairs.

7- Judicial Cases

The complaints relating to these issues are raised to the Society by persons whose legal cases remain inconclusive with lawcourts for long duration, or undergo lengthy judicial procedures; or by persons who have been subjected to maltreatment by some judges, or been denied their right to have their actions adjudicated, or others who have rejected a verdict or filed for compensation, or been deprived from traveling under a verdict.
